HAPPY NEW YEAR TO YOU ALL!
15/1/21

Update

Well that's the end of the first full week of remote learning for schools since the recent closure. Phew! Everyone has done remarkably well considering we had little notice. I do think it helped that we had some practise from the first lockdown but I know that there are different challenges for us all this time around.

We will be continuing to work this way into the February half term and possibly beyond. You may have heard that schools may need to have a phased return so it important that we prepare ourselves to be working this way throughout the spring term. Sorry!

We have spoken to many parents this week and we have listened to all your concerns, problems, questions, thoughts etc. We will continue to provide support for your child's learning and we are here to help in any way we can. You are doing the best you can and your best is good enough. We will provide further support again next week but we do not want to bombard you with too much in one go! I take my hat off to you all, especially those who are working from home for their own jobs also, and this is why we are looking at ways of making it as easy as possible for our parents to manage. Next week we will be sending more information about the live sessions of learning, and also some ideas to help parents with the problems of managing the school day. You are not alone!!

Have a relaxing weekend, and enjoy your quality family time! It is certainly well deserved.
